March 2008

Vol. 30 No. 3

FROM OUR PASTOR

Welcome!

Beginning March 2nd, several new ministers will be arriving to serve our church. We are thrilled at who and how God led various ministers to our staff. Please give a big Midway welcome to the following.

The Rev. Michael (and Lisa) Brock began his duties on March 2, following a splendid reception. As Assistant Pastor, Rev. Brock will be working in the areas of assimilation, visitation, outreach, and discipleship of men. He will preach his first sermons here on the evenings of March 9 and March 23 (Easter). The Brocks will live near Kennesaw Due West, and they have five wonderful children.

The Rev. Marc (and Kate) Harrington begins his service as Assistant Pastor for Children and Families on March 9. Marc is a graduate of Reformed Seminary (Charlotte) and has served at the Independent Presbyterian Church in Savannah and Golden Isles PCA on St. Simon's Island. He will oversee the Children's Ministry, disciple young families in family worship, and assist in other areas of ministry. We think you'll love getting to know both Marc and Kate.

Joel (and Stefanie) Smit will graduate from Greenville Seminary and plans to be ordained in May. He will serve as the Assistant Pastor to Youth and Families, having the primary responsibilities of ministering to our Middle and High School students. Joel is originally from Iowa, and Stefanie is from California, where the Smits met in college. Their 5 month-old son Peter is the star of the family.

The whole congregation also owes a big thanks to the following elders who chaired the search committees for these positions: Mike Kline, Jim Wolff, and Scott Keese.

Let us thank God for these gifted pastors that he has led to our church. Please support each of them in your prayers as they transition.

Philadelphia Conference on Reformed Theology

(PCRT) dates (April 4-6) and needs.

After much prayer and preparation, the PCRT Conference is a little over a month out! Many visitors and some of the finest preachers in America will be AT YOUR CHURCH, April 4-6. We hope you'll all support and benefit from this outstanding conference. You may sign up at the church office or by using one of the envelopes in the Narthex or Lobby of Fellowship Hall. Midway members receive over 50% off!! You may also sign up via Sunday Schools.

Posters and bulletin inserts are available if you'd like to share this event with other friends or churches.

There are also many opportunities to serve and lend a hand. The weekly bulletin lists the various working committees. If you could possibly help with refreshments, advertising, registration, the book table, or other aspects, please contact Sherry Cowan or the leader of the committee listed in the bulletin.

This really is an outstanding opportunity for our church. Would you please consider inviting a friend and reaching out to someone?

Cutting Floor: Charles Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher of the 19th century, one of the greatest preachers in the history of Christendom, reflecting on his own coming to faith in Christ at 16 years of age.

"Well can I remember the manner in which I learned the doctrines of grace in a single instant. Born, as all of us are by nature, [someone who believed in the power and the independence and the goodness of my own will] . . . I did not see the grace of God. When I was coming to Christ, I thought I was doing it all myself, and though I sought the Lord earnestly, I had no idea the Lord was seeking me. I do not think the young convert is at first aware of this.

I can recall the very day and hour when first I received those truths into my soul – when they were, as John Bunyan says, burnt into my heart as with a hot iron, and I can recollect how I felt that I had grown on a sudden from a babe into a man – that I had made progress in Scriptural knowledge, through having found, once for all, the clue to the truth of God. One week-night, when I was sitting in the house of God, I was not thinking much about the preacher’s sermon, .... The thought struck me, ‘How did you come to be a Christian?’ I sought the Lord. ‘But how did you come to seek the Lord?’ The truth flashed across my mind in a moment – I should not have sought Him unless there had been some previous influence in my mind to make me seek Him. I prayed, thought I, but then I asked myself, How came I to pray? I was induced to pray by reading the Scriptures. How came I to read the Scriptures? I did read them, but what led me to do so? Then, in a moment, I saw that God was at the bottom of it all, and that He was the Author of my faith, and so the whole doctrine opened up to me, and from that doctrine I have not departed to this day, and I desire to make it my constant confession, ‘I ascribe my change wholly to God.’” [Autobiography, i, 165]

“Twice on Sunday?” (below) recently appeared in New Horizons.

Dear James,

You were probably expecting this letter. Your mother seemed upset Sunday when she told me that you are not going to evening worship. I remember having my share of excuses as a college student, too. I am also aware that many campus ministries provide Bible studies, dormitory fellowship, and the like on Sundays. These are designed with noble intentions. But when it comes to public worship, you should accept no substitutes.

Since you are familiar with the case for evening worship, I needn’t go into detail. You know that the fourth commandment instructs us to set the whole day apart for rest and worship. You know that Christ did not abrogate the fourth commandment, but transformed it into the Lord’s Day or Christian Sabbath. And you well know that it is still a day, not merely a couple of hours on Sunday morning.

Most American Protestants understood that until the end of the last century, when this practice fell on hard times. Now it is the minority report, even within some conservative Presbyterian denominations . . . . I agree with you that we shouldn’t do something just because we’ve always done it. Like your Mom, I too pine for simpler times. Like her, I have memories of you (when you were “Jimmy”) and Ben chasing fireflies and playing tag on the church lawn with other kids in the congregation while adults enjoyed fellowship on the front steps after evening worship.

Of course, times have changed, but that does not mean the evening service is passé. To claim as much is to say that tradition has not importance in the life of the church. But that is a subject best left for another letter.

Instead, let me encourage you to consider how evening worship helps Reformed Protestants to bring faith and practice into proper alignment. Worldliness has been a problem for Christians of all ages. To be “in the world but not of the world” is the constant dilemma. But faithful discipleship in modern culture often demands that we fight this perennial battle on new and unfamiliar fronts. When novelty, originality, and sincerity are assumed to be always good, as our age presumes, we confront unique forms of idolatry and often more subtle temptations to compromise our obedience to Christ. In response, it is not enough for the church to be “countercultural” in teaching only. The church must reinforce its beliefs with practices that give its doctrine plausibility. This helps Christian resist those voices that constantly whisper that “the old way of doing things is no longer important.”

This is what Sabbath keeping does. The Sabbath is akin to what sociologist call a “plausibility structure.” It is one of our religious duties that embody the Christian hope. This hope stems from the resurrection of Christ on the first day of the week and looks forward to the hope of the resurrection of all the redeemed. Evening worship is crucial in sustaining our Sabbath hope. Morning and evening worship together frame that day with worship. In gathering again at the close of the Sabbath, we bring the day of rest to a fitting conclusion.

I remember when I was young and looked for ways to engage in political protests on campus. It was, and still is in many places, what American college students do. Now get this: a simple act of worship can become a brazenly political act. If going to church on Sunday morning enables you to resist the conformity of American consumer culture by not suing the day either for shopping, brunch, or sports, returning to church on Sunday evening allows you to challenge the convention of your evangelical friends. Going to church on Sunday morning is a testimony to the world; going in the evening is a witness to worldly Christians.

The point is not to look different simply for the sake of looking odd. Instead, the point is that forms of devotion once considered normal for Presbyterians now appear to be bizarre, If we want to hold on to our Reformed heritage, we will increasingly need to wrestle with how strange our biblical faith and practice are. Unfortunately, for too many Presbyterians, being “Reformed” is a label without consequences. We need to seize and be seized by these truths of our faith.

From the Pastor cont. / Youth / Report from the Diaconate

My spiritual journey over the past two decades had impressed upon me the importance of reinforcing religious conviction with godly habits. What once seemed like a burden—having to go to the evening service—has become part of the day I look forward to each week.

I am not trying to browbeat you with a sense of guilt for missing evening worship. I would much prefer that instead of attending to keep your uncle happy, you go to the evening service with a sense that worship is the best possible aid for nurturing the hope within you because God himself has promised to be present with his people and to bless them. But I can't say that I'd rather you not go if your heart isn't in it. Sometimes by "going through the motion" we actually come to enjoy what at first seems difficult, sort of like learning to eat and enjoy oysters on the half shell (yes, I notice your intake last summer at the Labor Day picnic). It could very well be that God is using this life to cultivate in us a taste for the life to come.

Blessings,
"Uncle" Glen

One could learn a great deal about plants by studying horticulture, looking at photographs, botanical drawings, and painting of great landscapes. But think how much deeper the knowledge is when you actually walk through a garden, pick a flower, eat the fresh fruit or ripe tomato. I suppose the highly intellectual folks don't need to hear the wind in the grasses or smell the fragrances, but I do.

Being part of a short-term mission team is a similar experience for gaining a deeper knowledge of world missions. Even though our missionaries write wonderful letters and give field reports about their ministry it is not the same as actually being there and working along side them. Experiencing a different culture even for a couple of weeks will give you a deeper appreciation for the missionary's service. Worshiping with joyful new believers will challenge you. When everything is different – housing, dress, food, smells, language, music you see how much is the same in the body of Christ.

Below are excerpts from the 'Short Term Mission Trip Policy'

Purpose: The purpose of short term mission trips at Midway is to fulfill the Great Commission by proclaiming Jesus Christ through evangelism, discipling, church planting, church development, training/equipping of Christian leadership, or supporting ongoing Reformed ministries in these efforts.

It is the policy of the missions committee that international trips should be to locations where the committee is already supporting a missionary or organization. We believe that short-term trips provide an excellent opportunity to deepen our relationship with missionaries we are supporting and to help us to be an active part of their ministry. Trip opportunities should ..... have an impact in the area of ministry needed by the supported missionary.

Not everyone who desires to participate in a short-term trip will be ready. Those who do participate should have the attitude stated in 2 Corinthians 5 that they are ambassadors for Christ.

All who desire to participate should be evaluated based on the following:

- Spiritual maturity – Are they a growing Christian with the knowledge that they are a sinner saved by grace?
- Emotional maturity – Are they equipped to deal with the stress of a project? How will he/she react to a situation that demands patience and flexibility?
- Experience and skills – Has the person participated in trips before? Do they have skills in the areas of construction, language, evangelism or discipleship?
- Physical readiness – Is this person able to withstand the physical requirements of the project?

Midway supports two families who work with immigrant populations in London. Last year the team that went had a very successful trip. Scott Keesee has again agreed to lead the team. The trip dates are July 26 – August 2. Here is what they plan to be doing: Like last year, we will work with Ley Street Chapel and conduct the Holiday Bible Club. This is similar to our VBS, but many children of various nationalities will be present. We will also visit a local mosque, do street evangelism/book table, and go on an outing with the families of those who will be participating with the Bible Club. Ministering to the children and families of the Islamic faith, Sikh faith, and Buddhist faith are some of the highlights of this trip.

Please prayerfully consider going on this trip. The mission's committee will pay $500 towards the total cost of the trip (which will be approximately $2000 total) and you will see how God provides the remainder!

This is an "easy" trip! There is no language barrier! You won't feel "out of place" in this area! What a great opportunity to see God work in and through you this summer in London!

Participating on a mission team really helps me keep my priorities straight. Praying now about where God would have us go as our plans for Kenya were cancelled today.

Becky Blades, for the Missions Committee

Midway Nursery Ministry Information:

How can we encourage our children to show love by being kind to others and love those that are in need? Also, to do so without expecting something in return? Paul says, "Therefore, as God's chosen people, holy and dearly loved, clothe yourselves with compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness & patience" (Colossians 3:12). Giving help with that kind of spirit will be as much a gift to the one in need as the practical things done for him! It is a joy to see our children imitate us in learning to be less selfish. Let us look this week for opportunities to be a "good Samaritan" to someone in need and to lovingly give the required help in the spirit of Christ - humbly. That will indicate to our children how we are to live more clearly than anything we might try to teach verbally. "Come, you who are blessed by my Father; take your inheritance, the kingdom prepared for you since the creation of the world. For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison and you came to visit me. (Matthew 25:34-36) We and our children, as well as the recipients of our help, are the ones who will ultimately benefit - to the glory of God!
